What if you, too, knew it all?
You knew all the woodworkers and you knew all the workshops, and all the stories, because you heard them all before, and maybe you might not always fully remember them but I think that is not such a big deal - because everyone can tell a story: you can tell a story and I can and even my little sister Lolli can, even if she is very small and her stories never really have an ending

And so what if you could also draw all the things that are in your head or all the things that are not even there? Because, you know, in your head you picture everything the way you want them. And then when you have it, we would colour it and cut it out and then it would be around all the time and we would love it so much!

So, what if everything could be so happy in the world?

That forgotten ease of childhood

Our children's world is a wonderful, upside-down kind of a world.
It is based on that kind of ease, deduction and simplicity that us grown-ups so often struggle to see, even if it is in front of our own eyes. Isn't it one of the biggest presents of all when they let us enter this world to see all the magic and purest form of freedom and upside-down, boundless way of thinking?
This is why we believe they are guardians of our world, never letting it collapse.
There will always be a bunch of kids, who would jump up to the sky to bring it back to us again.

The story of all of our lives

The Eperfa toys connect to the two most influential premises in our personal lives: Lake Balaton, the largest lake of Hungary and the hills around Budapest. We know and love their fauna and flora, the houses and the Children's Railway as these evoke our childhood memories and retell them now to our own children.

Anna Nóra uses her toys to recall the stories of our childhood interweaved with memories connected to many of these locations; Emese created her fabric accessories and Nora her short rhymes to reminiscent.

We are responsible for the next generation

We have asked the associations who have the most in-depth knowledge in the specific areas (Balaton Uplands National Park, Balaton Shipping Co, Hungarian Ornithology Association, Pilis Forest Ltd, Széchenyi-Hill Children's Railway) to be our professional supporters. We have created our toys by working with them in a strong cooperation benefiting from their professional background.

Our toys teach children about the world around them, helping them endear the surrounding animals and plants, buildings and vehicles. Already at young age they learn how to be responsible for their environment.

All our toys contribute to the development of children's different skills.

All the materials used in production are perfectly safe.

Being responsible for the environment

All the wooden material used for the toys is sourced from the Danube Ipoly National Park as we believe that no one takes better care of forests than national parks, that takes their ecosystem as priority, from the smallest to the largest creatures.

We aim to use only nationally sourced material and choose workshops that are as close to each other as possible so that we can protect our environment by reducing necessary deliveries required for production.

Chance

Most of our toys are created by disabled or socially underprivileged people.
We believe that everyone is good at something, people only need the opportunity to unfold their real talent.

To produce our toys we choose types of wood that would decorate parks and alleys, but when they got old and collapsed they would undeservingly become wood for the fire. Except these few ones that landed at us, because these ones got back to the circle of childhood again.

We thrive to obtain all our material from Hungary and that all our manufacturers are from this country.
With this we mutually support each other and other small businesses similar to us.

So that our stories could come to life as toys, we had a crucial opportunity provided by Moholy-Nagy University of Art's Incubation programme, special thanks to our two mentors
Pál Koós & Imre Branyiczky for their support, patience and the belief in us from the beginning.

Harmony

All our toys are related to Lake Balaton and the hills around Budapest. For the colours of the toys we have chosen the humid greens of Lake Balaton, the grayish-pink of the sunsets, the thousands of shades of blue of the hills that are reflected in all our toys.

The toys can be combined with each other easily; the individual items, adapting to the child's development, are built on each other.

With all the toys we design we try to use as much natural material as possible. All the knots, spirals or small colour alterations in the material are part of these toys, telling their own little stories about themselves. As time goes by these materials mature together with the children, they change and take shape so that our toys could become one with their owners.
