RECYCLED PLASTICS

We do reuse plastic. It is often plastic that comes from toys and household goods. Our primary aim/goal is to reduce the sea of plastic waste, that is so harmful to/for our ecosystem. We use an infrared scanning machine to separate the colours and get rid of any contamination. We don't use any additional pigments to colour our products. Instead, we chose to keep the source material visible. This is done on purpose to remind the user of the importance of making the most of our precious and limited resources. Manual verification of the material takes place several times throughout the production process.

PRODUCTION

Our furniture is made in Italy. The technique is rotational moulding, which is a traditional way to produce plastic furniture. But we invented the new process of adding upcycled raw material using our own special formula. During the production process, not only machines are used, but there is significant manual input from skilled operators. Because of the special production process, each product is unique. The speckled pattern is never identical. The colour of the products may not look equal. The reason for this, the gradient look comes from the rotational moulding which is used in our production and from the composition of the material. It is a design choice we have consciously made, and we feel it contributes to the special identifiable look. The colour comes from the natural look, and it is part of its charm. Due to the unique production process, small holes can sometimes arise in the surface. Holes with a diameter of less than 5 mm or similar size are considered as no error and are also not eligible for return.

PRODUCTION COSTS

The production costs are relatively high, but this offset by the saving to the environment. Making furniture from up-cycled plastic may not be cheap but we believe it is worth it.

ETHOS

The value of cherishing our precious resources, this is what ecoBirdy is all about.

Our ethos is making the most of our precious resources and avoiding unnecessary waste.
